

Perjury Inquiry Cited

Panel Gets Report

By Laurence Stern
Washington Post Staff Writer

A Senate staff report recommends that a perjury investigation be initiated against former Central Intelligence Agency Director Richard M. Helms and accuses Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger of having "deceived" the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in sworn testimony.

The report, which centers on testimony given by high-ranking officials on U.S. covert intervention in Chile's internal political affairs, also recommends perjury and contempt investigations of three other government witnesses in the Chile inquiry.

Prepared by Jerome Levinson, chief counsel to the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Multinational Corporations, the confidential report will be taken up for possible action today at an executive session of the Foreign Relations Committee.

The committee has the option of endorsing or rejecting the report in whole or in part.

The targets of the proposed investigations are former Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Charles E. Meyer, former U.S. Ambassador to Chile Edward Korry, and William Broe, former chief of the CIA's Latin American Division.

The report, submitted to subcommittee chairman Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho) and Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.), also asks that the record of Kissinger's confirmation hearing be reopened in public session to question the secretary on the "rationale" for U.S. covert political actions in Chile after 1969.

It further recommended that Kissinger be asked to testify generally on U.S. policy toward "duly elected governments which may be anticipated not to follow policies to the liking of the United States."

See CHILE, A7, Col. 7

RICHARD M. HELMS
... target of Hill report

HENRY A. KISSINGER
... accused of deception

Ford Defends Action

By Laurence Stern
Washington Post Staff Writer

President Ford defended U.S. covert political operations in Chile last night and said they were designed to preserve the opposition press and political parties after the 1970 election of the late Salvador Allende.

State Department and White House spokesmen were unable, however, to amplify on the President's assertion that the Allende government attempted, after its accession, "to destroy opposition news media ... and to destroy opposition political parties."

Mr. Ford said that the covert program was "in the best interests of the people in Chile and certainly in our best interests."

At the time of Allende's overthrow and death on Sept. 11, 1973, some 10 major newspapers covering the entire political spectrum nearly two dozen radio stations and all major political parties were operating in Chile.

The military junta that ousted Allende from power terminated operations of all political parties and permitted only pro-government newspapers to resume publication. The Chilean Congress, which ratified Allende's election in 1970, was also closed.

Both White House and State Department spokesmen said they had "no guidance" on the President's explanation for the initiation of the covert programs in Chile.

The issue emerged during the press conference in the context of recent disclosure that Central Intelligence Agency Director William E. Colby told a House subcommittee some $11 million in covert funds were authorized by a National Security Council body and targeted against Allende both before and after his election in 1970.

Mr. Ford also endorsed the kinds of covert actions carried out in Chile and other countries that are supervised by

See ALLENDE, A7, Col. 7

Perjury Probe Is Proposed On Chile Data

CHILE, From A1

The staff recommendations reflected rising concern in Congress over major discrepancies in the sworn testimony of high State Department witnesses and the disclosure of secret testimony last April 22 by CIA Director William E. Colby that the agency spent $3 million in Chile to foil the late Salvadore Allende's candidacy in 1964 and $8 million attempting to block his election and undermine his government after 1969.

The report cites previously secret testimony by Kissinger, delivered at an executive session of his confirmation hearing on Sept. 17, 1973, minimizing the role of the CIA in the 1970 Allende election.

It quotes Kissinger as saying:

"The CIA was heavily involved in 1964 in the election, was in a very minor way involved in the 1970 election and since then we have absolutely stayed away from any coups. Our efforts in Chile were to strengthen the democratic political parties and give them a basis for winning the election in 1976, which we expressed our hope was that Allende could be defeated in a free democratic election."

At the time Kissinger gave his testimony, the report noted, "the Forty Committee [the National Security Council's senior covert action panel] had already authorized the expenditure of . . . $8 million for the purpose of destabilizing the Allende government so as to precipitate its downfall."

Only a month before Kissinger testified, the report further noted, the Forty Committee—which he chaired—authorized the expenditure of $1 million of this amount for "further political destabilization."

The basis for these assertions was the Colby testimony as recounted by Rep. Michael Harrington (D-Mass.), a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The CIA's only comment on the Harrington disclosure was to question whether Colby has used the word "destabilization" in his April 22 testimony to a House ton (D-Mo.), during an executive hearing on the Helms nomination as ambassador to Iran on Feb. 7, 1973.

Symington: Did you have any money passed to the opponents of Allende?

Helms: No, sir.

Symington: So that the stories that you were involved in that are wrong entirely?

Helms: Yes sir.

But Colby's testimony, as reported in the Harrington letter, was that the CIA expended $500,000 in 1969 to fund anti-Allende forces and during the 1970 election $500,000 was given to opposition party personnel. After the Sept. 4 popular election in which Allende won a plurality, the account continued, $350,000 was authorized "to bribe the Chilean Congress" in an effort to "overturn" the results of the popular election in an ensuing congressional runoff.

The staff report alluded, for the first time, to the existence of a National Security Council Decision Memorandum prior to Allende's election which served as the "umbrella" under which the Forty Committee authorized clandestine activities designed to destabilize the Allende government.

Such a policy document would have been drafted under the direction of Kissinger who also chaired the Forty Committee meetings at which the anti-Allende action programs were authorized.

The report was also critical of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs John M. Hennessy, who assisted in coordinating U.S. economic policy toward the Allende government that leaned heavily toward withdrawal of lines of credit by such international lending bodies as the World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank and Export-Import Bank.

Hennessy said the Levinson report, "either perjured himself or seriously misled the subcommittee in stating that the primary consideration in U.S. economic policy toward the Allende government was Chile's credit-worthiness."

Broe, the CIA's highest-ranking operative for Latin ton disclosure was to question whether Colby has used the word "destabilization" in his April 22 testimony to a House CIA oversight committee chaired by Rep. Lucien Nedzi (D-Mich.).

Colby's only personal comment on the Harrington report was that he would neither confirm nor deny its authenticity since it was given in executive session. Last Friday Colby commented that the disclosure of his testimony through a confidential letter by Harrington to his chairman, Rep. Thomas Morgan (D-Pa.) raised questions about the ability of government witnesses to testify on "delicate" matters.

The report described as "disingenuous" Kissinger's testimony that since 1970 "we have absolutely stayed away from any coups" in Chile. Kissinger, wrote Levinson, "must have known that expending funds for the express purpose of creating political destabilization had to enhance the possibility, indeed the probability, of the coup which, in fact, took place."

In the case of Helms, the report cited an exchange between the former CIA director and one of his leading senatorial defenders, Stuart Symington,

Chile's credit-worthiness."

Broe, the CIA's highest-ranking operative for Latin America, was quoted in the report as having testified that there was no U.S. policy to intervene in the 1970 Chilean election. Broe's answers, however, are "technically shy of perjury," the report concluded, though they were "intended to convey the impression of a policy of non-intervention."

The testimony of Nathaniel Davis, U.S. ambassador to Chile during last year's anti-Allende coup, conformed to the "overall pattern of State Department witnesses dissembling and deceiving the committee and subcommittee with respect to the true scope of U.S. government activities designed to undermine the Allende regime," the Levinson report added. No action, however, was recommended against Davis.

Kissinger and Meyer were not available for comment. Korry, reached in New York, said he was "gratified that Mr. Levinson, after deliberately spreading the word that I have committed perjury, now reached the conclusion that I have not."

President Defends Operations in Chile

ALLENDE, From A1

the Forty Committee, an interdepartmental panel of the NSC responsible for management of those programs.

Ford noted that the Forty Committee reviews "every covert operation undertaken by our government and that information is relayed to the responsible congressional committees where it is reviewed by House and Senate committees."

"It seems to me that the Forty Committee should continue in existence and I am going to meet with the responsible congressional committees to see whether or not they want any changes in the review process so that the Congress as well as the President are fully informed and are fully included in the operations for any such actions," Mr. Ford added.

As far as could be determined in interviews with chairmen and members of the two principal oversight committees in the House and Senate last week, they had not previously been briefed by past administrations on the details and scope of the anti-Allende operations as they were revealed in the Colby testimony.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), one of the most senior CIA overseers on Capitol Hill, told The Washington Post he was "very surprised" at Colby's recent revelations.

Asked whether, under international law, the United States has a right to seek to destabilize a constitutionally elected government abroad, Mr. Ford said: "I'm not going to pass judgment on whether it's permitted or authorized under international law. It's a recognized fact that, historically, as well as presently, such actions are taken in the best interests of the countries involved."

The President said he had been reliably informed that Communist countries spend "vastly more money than we do" for covert operations.

He reiterated the claims made by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and CIA Director Colby that "our government had no involvement whatsoever in the Allende coup ... The facts are we have no involvement in any way whatsoever in the coup itself."

Last night the only record of an anti-press action by the Allende government was the closing June 21, 1973, for six days of the leading opposition newspaper El Mercurio on a charge that it was inciting subversion. The newspaper, which controls the country's major news chain, was reopened by an appellate court decision.